The rich cheese taste is similar to that of English cheesecake! Its thick consistency melts in the mouth and is really delicious. It was easy to tell that I was eating a luxury one-of-a-kind dessert. Truly special experience! - Maya

The many traditional Japanese sweets let you appreciate the beauty of the four seasons with their sophisticated sweet taste and beautiful appearance.

The carrot bun had a robust yet sweet carrot flavor that I hadn't tasted before, and the combination of burdock and miso bean paste in the hanabira mochi was just exquisite! The strawberry daifuku was also delicious, with the flavors of the strawberry (which are also grown in my home country) and red bean paste blending together perfectly. - Maya Magome is a treasure trove of delicious sweet shops! If you come all the way to visit, it would be a waste not to enjoy some tasty sweets! We paid a visit to four sweet shops in Magome together with Maya, Ota City's Coordinator for International Relations (CIR), from Basingstoke, England! There are plenty of other delicious sweet shops in Magome in addition to those we visited this time. Why not take a tour of Magome's sweet shops and try finding your own personal favorite?

The Vache tastes similar to English lemon tart, and the Titanic to Christmas pudding! The Japanese chestnuts used in the Mont Blanc are not native to England, so it was a new flavor for me. They were all absolutely delicious! - Maya

It was my first time eating candied sweet potato! Crispy on the outside and moist on the inside, the contrast of textures was really interesting! You can really taste the gentle sweetness of the sweet potato within its thick coating. - Maya
